2) Do not fear failure but rather fear not trying

"You were born to stand out, stop trying to fit in."
→ Take action, make mistakes & learn

Ans: "Do not fear failure but rather fear not trying" → Status quest!

During the dawn of the 20th century, The New York Times reported that the, fantasy of all mankind i.e. aeroplanes will take another 10,000 years to develop.

In the same country, a set of two brothers embarked on proving the naysayers wrong. They failed multiple times. ~~already~~ ~~and~~ even ~~their~~ ^{men} own father, refused to believe in ~~their~~ ^{men} ~~sons~~ dream. Good!

On a bright morning, the brothers became the first humans to carry out the first humanflight for 12 seconds. They are now famously known as the "Wright Brothers".

Now, the question arises that whether the brothers are failures? Should one success ^{Before answering them lets appreciate what} erase all previous failures? ^{lets} ^{appreciate what} Despite many threats, pleadings from family, they feared not failures, but rather they feared not trying. That is why their names are etched in golden letters in history.

Coming back to the question, what are failures? For a child, a failure might be not able to win a medal in her school competition. It might not be so, in the eyes of her mother. So, a failure ^{is} ~~is~~ geo-centric theory, whereas he believed in helio-centric theory. He set out to prove geo-centric theory but failed. But, at the same time he succeeded in developing heliocentric theory.

~~be defined as not meeting one's objective as per one's perception.~~ ^{Perception in nature!} ~~Complexity~~

Galileo was a failure by his values and turned a success by his reformed values. Now, let's discuss what makes one fear her failure.

By the socialization one receives from childhood, failure is treated as a taboo subject. Failure is a point of no return, they say. Sometimes, the children of being a very tender age believe it and they avoid it like the plague.

This fear psychosis continues in adults.

relationship, the fear of failure in a project and the list goes on. It also makes sense that one want to achieve their objective, without obstacles and without failing. It is the ever interesting tenet of the human psyche.

But the irony of the world is that, there is no success, without the failure greeting us at the door ~~great~~ first.

As Rabindranath Tagore said "Failure is not the opposite of success. Rather it is the stepping stone of success"

A failure makes us learn many things. It teaches us to be ruthlessly introspective. It makes us a better person. French revolution, based on the grandiose ideals of liberty, equality and justice, failed within few years.

The atrocities of Robispiere and Napolean's backtracking of democracy hold testament to it. But due to this failure, these ideals strengthened in the current French constitution.

Failure tells us the changes that needs to be done in the journey. It is a compass for the journey. Like the prominent poet said

"Some things you learn best in calm, while some things you learn best in storm", it answers the previous question that one success does not erase all its failures. It celebrates all the failures.

But, the journey is tiresome. In the journey, we might be faced with unfriendly travellers named doubt and sometimes, the journey might be lonely and dark.

From here, fear of trying arises. Instead of trying, one might be safe inside the comfort zone. Like the saying goes "

The ship in harbor is safe, but that is not what it is made for", humans are made for to venture, where their minds, their ambitions, their passions take them to, rather than having the fear to try.

Hence, there should be a fear to not try. But it is not easy. Not even mortals, even gods face doubt. Lord Hanuman when crossing the ocean was faced with doubt, whether he will be able to cross it.

But, one has to carry out his nishkam karma. He must pursue out his journey with fear of not trying. He has to have some tools in his arsenal for his arduous journey.

Firstly, hope is the warm fuzzy light on the journey. It makes us take steps forward, when all we want to do is stop. It is the "bird that sings even when the dawn is dark, by feeling the light".

Secondly, courage is the tool to bravely cross the obstacles faced in the journey. Raja Ram Mohan Roy was successful after almost all his life, for his courage to stick to his ideals and stop sati in its ^{social/evil} tracks.

At the same time, there are many who have been successful in their goals, but ^{are} on the journey, which should not have been undertaken. ~~to do~~ ~~work~~ commit genocide and partially successful at it. Similarly, Bin Laden was successful in conducting terrorist operations.

But, at the same time, they failed. (in the essence of the word). Good journeys undertaken for the benefit of the world, will have moral power to not fear failure, but also achieve success faster.

~~At the same time~~, ^{Also} fear is also a necessary emotion. Early humans, if not without fear, could not have been alive enough, for them to evolve into Homo sapiens. The fear of threats ~~lurking out~~, made them cautious and at the same time, were brave enough to meet their objectives.

So, the holistic concoction of "Optimism of the will and Pessimism of the intellect" is needed. The fear to figure out effective plan of action, before trying, along with the bravery to take the action is the duty of the modern human being.

The success might be possible or the success might just be outside the grasp.

But the human effort and human ingenuity does not stop and should not stop. ~~Human effort~~ ^{Success is not guaranteed by human effort}

This ideology needs to be integrated in current humanity, with the need being shown by rising mental health problems and suicides. WHO estimates that for ages 15-24, suicide is the main cause of casualty, ^{Who is the main cause}

The ideology integration requires the role of teachers, education, media and religion, along with and mainly, family. The ideals of risk-taking, but being cautious requires building up self-confidence and the emotional resilience. Media supportive of people suffering from mental health issues such as anxiety, could propel the ideology in the society.

Similar to the wright brothers, one must always keep trying. Issac Newton tried in various domains and was successful in many domains. But, the medicine sector which he set out for, in the beginning of his journey, remained a failure. But, he never regretted trying it.
